AMENDING THE FLORIDA CONSTITUTION

There are a number of ways to amend our state Constitution. In fact, there are more paths to amending the Florida Constitution than are available in any other state. The five methods are laid out in Article XI, labeled Amendments.

Amendments Proposed by the Legislature

Section 1, the State Legislature can put a proposed amendment on the ballot if 60% or more of the legislators in each chamber agree to do so in a joint resolution. The amendment will be presented for voter approval on the next general election ballot more than 90 days after the joint resolution is adopted.

Constitution Revision Commission

Section 2 provides for the Constitution Revision Commission, which convenes every 20 years for the purpose of reviewing Florida's Constitution and proposing changes for voter consideration. The Commission meets for about one year, traveling the State of Florida, identifying issues, performing research and possibly recommending changes to the Constitution, which go on the next general election ballot at least 180 days after the Commission makes its recommendations. The last comprehensive review of Florida's Constitution occurred in 2017.

The commission consists of 37 members, which include: the Attorney General, 15 members chosen by the Governor, 9 members chosen by the Speaker of the House, 9 members chosen by the President of the Senate and 3 members selected by the Chief Justice of the state Supreme Court (with the advice of the justices). The Governor designates one member as commission chair, and any vacancies are filled the same way as the original appointments.

Citizens' Initiative

Section 3, with some limits, grants Florida citizens the right to initiate constitutional amendments. To amend the Constitution by citizen initiative, proponents must form a political committee, register with the Division of Elections and then create a petition. After the Division of Elections reviews and approves the petition, supporters must demonstrate that there's sufficient popular support for their measure to merit certification by the Secretary of State. To qualify for the ballot, proponents must collect signatures from registered voters equal to at least 8% of the total number of statewide votes cast in the previous Presidential election, and the signatures must be from at least 13 of Florida's 25 Congressional districts. Additionally at least 10% of the total number of signatures required to qualify for the ballot must be gathered from at least seven Congressional districts

Once signatures are validated by the Supervisors of Elections, the Secretary of State certifies the petition for Florida Supreme Court review. If the Court approves, the initiative is qualified to go on the ballot for the next general election. Of note, Florida has a very strict single-subject rule, requiring each initiative to address just one subject (except amendments limiting the power of government to raise revenue, which are exempted from the single-subject restriction). While initiative petitions may circulate indefinitely, a voter's signature is only valid for four years from the date it was signed. After the proposed amendment qualifies for the ballot, a financial impact statement is developed and included on the ballot, if applicable.

Constitutional Convention

Section 4 grants the people the right to put a question on the ballot as to whether a constitutional convention shall be called. To place a call for a convention on the ballot, proponents must collect signatures from registered voters equal to 15% of the total number of statewide ballots cast in the previous Presidential election, and follow the same signature validation/certification process as for a citizen-initiated constitutional amendment.

After sufficient signatures have been certified, the question "Shall a constitutional convention be held?" will be submitted to voters at the next general election more than 90 days after the petition is filed. If approved by a simple majority, each state legislative district elects a member to the constitutional convention at the next succeeding general election, and the convention convenes in the capital 21 days later. The Convention must file any proposed constitutional revisions with the custodian of state records no later than 90 days before the next succeeding general election.

Taxation & Budget Reform Commission (TBRC)

Section 6 establishes the Taxation and Budget Reform Commission, which may place proposed amendments on the ballot if 18 of its 25 members approve. Per Section 6 the TBRC examines "the state budgetary process, the revenue needs and expenditure processes of the state, the appropriateness of the tax structure of the state, and governmental productivity and efficiency."

It last met in 2007, and will reconvene every 20 years thereafter. (Note: Only a single recommendation of the 2007–08 TBRC actually made it onto the 2008 ballot, and voters rejected it.) Proposed constitutional revisions must be submitted no later than 180 days before the general election in the second year following the commission's establishment.

The commission includes 11 members chosen by the Governor, 7 members chosen by the Speaker of the House and 7 members chosen by the President of the Senate, none of whom may be members of the legislature when appointed. There are also four non-voting ex officio members who are members of the legislature at the time of appointment. The Speaker of the House and the President of the Senate each choose two of these members, one of whom must be a member of the minority party in their chamber. The commission elects its own chair, who cannot be a member of the legislature, and vacancies are filled the same way as the original appointments.

The Vote

Constitutional amendments must be approved by at least 60% of voters in order to pass. If an amendment is approved, it takes effect in January following the election, unless the amendment specifies otherwise. Until 2006, only a simple majority vote was required to approve a new amendment to the Florida Constitution. On November 7, 2006, Floridians passed Amendment 3 (proposed by the Legislature), which increased the required percentage for an amendment to be accepted into the constitution to 60%.

Guidelines for Determining When Residency Qualifications for Elected Office Must be Met

DE Reference Guide 0008 (Updated 02/2020)

These guidelines are for reference only. They are not to be construed as legal advice or representation. For any particular set of facts or circumstances, refer to the applicable state, federal law, and case law, and/or consult a private attorney before drawing any legal conclusions or relying upon this information.

RESIDENCY REQUIREMENTS – GENERAL OVERVIEW

- In general. Unless otherwise provided for constitutionally, legislatively or judicially, any residency requirement for an elected office must be met at the time of assuming office. (For example, the Governor must have resided in the state for 7 years by time of election. See s. 5, Art. IV, Fla. Const.)
- Oath. State law requires that all candidates at the time of qualifying subscribe to an oath (s. 99.021, F.S.) that they are qualified electors of their county. In order to be a qualified elector, one must be a resident of Florida and the county wherein he or she registers to vote. The oath also provides that the candidate is qualified for the office being sought. However, this oath is considered prospective in nature – it becomes effective at the time of assuming office, unless otherwise provided for constitutionally, legislatively or judicially. See Davis v. Crawford, 116 So. 41 (Fla. 1928); State v. Haskell, 72 So. 651 (Fla. 1916).
- Continuous residency. Any residency requirement for an office is a continuous one. Failure to maintain the residency throughout the term results in vacancy in office. See generally s. 3, Art. X, Fla. Const. and s. 114.01(1)(g), F.S. In absence of a statute, constitutional provision, or municipal ordinance that establishes a residency requirement, failure to establish or maintain residency alone does not trigger a vacancy in office. See AGO 75-113; AGO 88-11 (exception for redistricting).

RESIDENCY REQUIREMENTS – SPECIFIC OFFICES

- The following represent situations where the law addresses when residency requirements must be met for candidates and elected officials.

If a vacancy occurs in the office of Vice-President, the President shall nominate a successor who must be confirmed by a majority vote of both houses of Congress before assuming office. The Presidential Succession Act of 1947 (formally Title 3, Chapter 1 Section 19 of the United States Code), states: In the event that both the Chief Executive and Vice-President were incapacitated, the Speaker of the House would succeed to the Presidency.

Electoral College:

The President is elected by electoral votes, there are 538 Electoral College members, and Florida has a total of 27 electoral votes, one for each U.S. Senator and U.S. Representative in Congress. In order to win the presidency, the candidate must receive 270 electoral votes.

In Florida, the presidential candidate who wins a majority of the popular votes in the state also earns all the votes of the state's Electoral College members. Each state has the same number of Electoral College members as the total of its Senators and Representatives. However, in this method of electing the president, candidates can win the most Electoral College votes, and thus the presidency, even without winning the most popular votes. Current campaign strategy targets populous states with the most electors, including California, Texas, Florida, New York and Illinois.

Merit retention presently applies to Florida’s Appellate judges, judges on the Florida Supreme Court and judges on the Florida District Court of Appeals (not to trial judges on circuit or county courts). Merit retention judges appear on the General Election ballot only.

District Court of Appeals Judges are subject to a retention election among only those voters who reside in the jurisdiction of each judge’s respective appellate district. Supreme Court judges appear on the ballot statewide because their court’s jurisdiction extends throughout Florida.

If a vacancy occurs in the office of the District Court of Appeals, the Governor fills the vacancy through a “Merit Selection” process involving judicial nominating commissions composed of lawyers and other citizen members who screen judicial applicants and recommend up to six nominees for the position. The Governor appoints one of these qualified candidates to fill the vacancy. (As provided in Statute 78.260)
